Godot

#3 Testing

Tim Ottinger @tottinge · Mar 9

Once upon a time people argued that TDD is impossible.
You can't write a test first, obviously, because you can't test something that doesn't exist. It's obviously ludicrous.
But you change how you think about "a test" and it works just fine.
